

Irland 2016

6. del

Vi var på en længere tur med meget natur, med
bl.a. fårehyrde og hans hunde.

Jeg har en film derfra.

Flere fra vores hold stod af ved Killarney National Park og gik hjem til hotellet

KILLARNEY NATIONAL PARK
PÁIRC NÁISIÚNTA CHILL AIRNE

Killarney National Park, 10,289 hectares in extent, comprises the mountains and woodlands which surround the world famous Lakes of Killarney, as well as the three Lakes themselves. The Park includes the peaks of Mangerton, Torc, Shehy and the Purple mountains. Just to the west of the Park rises MacGillycuddy's Reeks, the highest mountain range in Ireland.

The nucleus of the National Park is the 4,000 hectare Bourn Vincent Memorial Park, formerly known as the Muckross Estate, which was presented to the State in 1932 by Mr. and Mrs. W. Bowers Bourne and their son-in-law Senator Arthur Vincent to be Ireland's first National Park.

In recent years, lands and waters of the former Kenmare Estate have been added to bring the Park to its present size and prominence as Ireland's foremost National Park.

In 1981, the Park was designated as a Biosphere Reserve under the UNESCO Man and the Biosphere Programme. It is therefore a part of a world network of natural areas which have conservation, research, education and training as major objectives. Killarney National Park is part of the largest candidate Special Area of Conservation (SAC) in the country under the EU Habitats Directive as well as being a Special Protection Area (SPA) under the EU Birds directive.
